The un(law)fullness of the law

By Charissa Kok

Rigid ragged and ruthless
Calm and clean on the surface
Known to some, estranged to many
The law only alive through spirit of society

Accumulated written jungle, freedom
Fought for and derived statute by statute
The ties that bind break and bear
Human conduct (in)justice surely fair

For bona fide breathing unity
Dead without the enforcement security
Patriots rejoicing at forlorn solidarity
The house of justice rather a home of instrumentality
