

Bartlett and team out to collect maximum points

By AARON DUBE

SHAUN BARTLETT wants to use the Fifa international break to fine-tune his University of Pretoria charges.

The AmaTuks coach said the break was a bonus for him to look at different options against Ubuntu Cape Town when he hosts them at Tuks Stadium in Cape Town on Saturday.

Then, AmaTuks will have two games at home in a row and the coach believes his team should do the best and rise to the occasion even though they will take it one game at a time.

AmaTuks will entertain both Richards Bay and Tshakhuma Tsha Madzivhandila at home after finishing off with the Cape Town outfit.

Bartlett told SunSport: "We work tirelessly building the team from last season as we didn't achieve our goals.

"We can't complain, we have a strong squad that will see us getting an automatic promotion."

The former Bafana Bafana marksman said he has 30 players and only used 20 in the 10 games played already and is happy with the outcome even though there's still room for improvement.

"The team need to be consistent, win a few games and stay in the top. We play to win in all the games - whether away or home - it doesn't matter. Our priority is to collect maximum points and stay at the top," Bartlett added.

The signing of Zambian international defender Davies Nkausu, former Pirates player Clifford Ngobeni, and Namibian forward Henrico Botes

have brought in stability and experience to influence young players when the pressure mounts.

The coach said the race at the top was tight but his strategy would give players enough confidence to deal with upcoming games and absorb unnecessary pressure that could jeopardise their season plans.

"Our priority is to collect maximum points and to stay in contention for the number one spot on the log, which is achievable when one works very hard," Bartlett concluded.

AmaTuks coach Shaun Bartlett has welcomed the Fifa international break.

Photo by Backpagepix

Bartlett and team out to collect maximum points

By AARON DUBE

SHAUN BARTLETT wants to use the Fifa international break to fine-tune his University of Pretoria charges.

The AmaTuks coach said the break was a bonus for him to look at different options against Ubuntu Cape Town when he hosts them at Tuks Stadium in Cape Town on Saturday.

Then, AmaTuks will have two games at home in a row and the coach believes his team should do the best and rise to the occasion even though they will take it one game at a time.

AmaTuks will entertain both Richards Bay and Tshakhuma Tsha Madzivhandila at home after finishing off with the Cape Town outfit.

Bartlett told SunSport: "We work tirelessly

building the team from last season as we didn't achieve our goals.

"We can't complain, we have a strong squad that will see us getting an automatic promotion."

The former Bafana Bafana marksman said he has 30 players and only used 20 in the 10 games played already and is happy with the outcome even though there's still room for improvement.

"The team need to be consistent, win a few games and stay in the top. We play to win in all the games – whether away or home – it doesn't matter. Our priority is to collect maximum points and stay at the top," Bartlett added.

The signing of Zambian international defender Davies Nkausu, former Pirates player Clifford Ngobeni, and Namibian forward Henrico Botes

have brought in stability and experience to influence young players when the pressure mounts.

The coach said the race at the top was tight but his strategy would give players enough confidence to deal with upcoming games and absorb unnecessary pressure that could jeopardise their season plans.

"Our priority is to collect maximum points and to stay in contention for the number one spot on the log, which is achievable when one works very hard," Bartlett concluded.

AmaTuks coach Shaun Bartlett has welcomed the Fifa international break.

Photo by Backpagepix

