

Eagle, Eagle, Shining Bright

Eagle, eagle
Shining bright
Faster than a ray of light
Swifter than a waft of wind
Are you born of sun or air?
In your quintessence of excellence
Is it not you who are made
In the image of God?

Eagle, eagle
Flying high, higher and highest
What other creature can we compare to you?
You who alone can tame the storm with the mastery of your wings
Riding its rage till it dies down!
You who alone can fly non-stop from continent to continent
Without ever touching down for rest or sustenance!
You who alone have seen the world like no other living creature has
And knew long before any man knew it
That the earth was round
Not flat!

Eagle, eagle
How majestic you are!
Conquering the skies on swift wings
Staying on high
Longer than any living thing can
Are you bird
Or are you some divinity
We know not of?

Eagle, eagle
How I wish
You'd lift me
To new heights
I dare not dream of!
How I wish
You'd carry me
On your regal wings
And let me experience
Being
Sublime!

Read through the following extracts and then answer the questions set on them. Remember that you should use your own words as far as possible. Do not quote unless you are instructed to do so.

AFRICAN ART - PLATE 40.

40

African Art

Plate 40 Woman with three children. Afo, Northern Nigeria. Wood. Height 27 in 68 cm. Horniman Museum, London. This is the most superb example of a fertility figure in the whole of African Art. Originally it was attributed to the Yoruba in Nigeria by Major Buxton who collected it on a military expedition in 1906, but then Bernard Fagg pointed out that similar figures existed in a small tribe known as the Afo who live in the hills just north of the River Benue in Northern Nigeria. Very little is known about the Afo who make these carvings. Their villages are remote and inaccessible. And the people will not come anywhere near the roads and the neighbouring towns. During the nineteenth century they lived in large towns, but they were conquered and overrun by the Islamic Fulani. It is possible that much of their art perished at the same time. Only one fertility figure like this one has been seen in the possession of the Afo themselves, but others may be hidden away and only brought out for ceremonies which take place in the hills far away from the European and Muslim eyes. Examples in a similar style have been seen or collected in the towns and villages of the neighbouring peoples as much as a hundred miles away, and these peoples say the Afo make the carvings and that only Afo possess this skill. It seems probable that the figure is used by the woman's secret society at a festival when the first shoots of corn begin to appear above ground. The figures are wrapped in cloths with only the head left visible. Then they are carried on the heads of the bearers to the chief of the women where they are set down in a row outside her compound. The women come and make sacrifices to the figures so that the earth-goddess will help them with the birth of children,.

Choose the most suitable answer from the options given. Write down only the number of the question and the letter of the option you choose.

1.1 Woman with three children is a

State whether the following statements are TRUE or FALSE. QUOTE from the passage to prove your answer:

1.4 It is easy to reach the Afo villages. (2)

1.5 The Afo people have only one of these fertility figures in their possession (2)

1.6 The figures were seen as icons by the women (2)

- 1.7 Explain in your OWN words what a "fertility figure" is. (2)
- 1.8.1 Is the following statement a FACT or an OPINION? (1)
This is the most superb example of a fertility figure in the whole of African art.

GREAT SOUTH AFRICAN ARTIST

The lean and hungry years of one of South Africa's most famous artists were recalled by his daughter in 1986 as centenary fires were lit to celebrate Jacob Hendrik Pierneef's birth.

Me Marita Bailey revealed the tale of the Blue Magaliesberg - the young Pierneef's unusual engagement gift to his sweetheart. It was given, because the artist was too poor to afford a ring. But he was a romantic and wanted to give his betrothed something special. It became quite a feature in the Pierneef household. At one stage they were obliged to sell it to make ends meet, however, in better years they bought it back. Ironically, a Pierneef today could fetch anything up to R300,000.00.

She recalled: " My father was like a diamond. He had many facets, and his work reflected all these. "Me Bailley said that the Blue Magaliesberg would become the property of Adrian (son of Ian and Marita) who would continue the family tradition. He, too, would present his betrothed with the work of art.

During the artist's lifetime - he died in 1957 at the age of 71 - he produced more than 2,000 works. He gave many of these to friends or offered them as payment for various services.

SECTION C: LANGUAGE QUESTION 3

Read the following passage before answering the questions based on VINCENT VAN GOGH.

VINCENT VAN GOGH

The story of Vincent van Gogh's life has become a legend. His dedication of purpose, his extreme sensitivity to colours and shapes, and his final agonised battle against insanity, all become a part of our image of this great Dutch painter. Through the most agonising extremes of illness, he continually laboured to bring himself back into focus upon the facts of nature, to paint landscapes, bowls of flowers, the corridors of the hospitals where he was confined, the faces of the gentle doctor, his neighbours and his artist friends.

In these uncontrolled swings between reality and wild distortion, Van Gogh's genius expressed and destroyed itself- he eventually committed suicide.

The Encyclopedia of Art. Golden Press. New York.

Supply ONE word for each numbered space. You have to refer directly to the wording of the FIRST paragraph of the passage entitled "VINCENT VAN GOGH" to determine the answer in each case.

Write only the word next to the number.

- 3.1 Van Gogh was 3.1.1 3.1.2 to colours and shapes. He had an agonising battle to remain 3.1.3. While 3.1.4 ill, he painted his gentle 3.1.5 and his many artist 3.1.6 faces. (6)

Give the correct form of the word in brackets. Write only the answer next to the number.

- 3.2. As the 3.2.1 (admire) of his art increased, 3.2.2 (recur) breakdowns 3.2.3 (sweep) him 3.2.4 (rapid) away from the holds he 3.2.5 (cling) to in the world. At moments, frenzy and 3.2.6 (ecstatic) made him paint a 3.2.7 (scenic) such as Starry Night in which thick whiplashes of colour stir the dark 3.2.8 (body) of the trees. This 3.2.9 (legend) genius was indeed an 3.2.10 (excel) painter.

Read the following passage before answering the questions based on it:

VINCENT

Van Gogh said that he wanted to paint those sunflowers bright yellow. His critics wanted to know who inspired him to use such vivid colours. After his lifetime, many artists copied his style to express their own troubled feelings. But because they did not possess his peculiar genius, their work seldom compared to his.

4.1. Supply ONE word for each blank space in the following sentences, referring to the FIRST TWO lines of the passage entitled "VINCENT":

Vincent said: " 4.1.1 4.1.2 to paint 4.1.3 sunflowers bright yellow."
His critics asked him: " Who 4.1.4 4.1.5 to use bright colours? " (5)

4.2 Complete the following sentence referring to line 2.

In the 19th century his style _____ by many artists. (1)

Combine the following TWO sentences with After

4.3. Other artists copied Vincent's style.
The critics rejected other artists' art. (2)

Choose the INCORRECT answer from the options given below. Write only the number and letter of the option you have chosen.

4.4. Van Gogh's peculiar genius refers to his
A natural talent to paint
B extraordinary creative ability
C insipid tendency towards art
D instinctive imaginative capacity (2)

4.5. You recently had a conversation with your friend who is also an art lover. You invited her to accompany you to a gallery nearby. Give the CORRECT form of the word in brackets OR supply ONE word for each blank space. Write only the answer next to the number.

YOU: Won't you please come with me to the art 4.5.1 (exhibit)?

ANN: 4.5.2 I bring my sister along?

YOU: Of 4.5.3. The more, the 4.5.4.

ANN: She 4.5.5 (courage) me every day to show more interest in art. She loves Van Gogh, because he was one of those painters who 4.5.6 using bright colours many years ago.

SECTION A: READING COMPREHENSION NO 2

QUESTION 1

Read through the following passage Survive the Great Outdoors and answer the following questions:

By Julie Mercer

Over the last year, “Great Outdoors: has run a number of hiking articles in a special “How to ...” series, and if you’ve been following the advice you should have no problem when you hit the trail. But even if you are prepared, things can still go wrong and we wrap up the series by looking at how to survive should you encounter an emergency.

There are a few basic things to remember if you are faced with a crisis, and one of them is to stop and review your situation thoroughly. Look at the weather, terrain, available resources and time of day and only then plan a course of action. Above all, stay calm!

Getting Lost

If you are out of a recognised trail then help should not be too far away, as the wardens usually monitor exactly how many people are using the trail at any given time. If you have strayed off the path, try retracing your steps and make sure you have not overlooked a change in trail direction. Signal for help audibly and visibly – either blow three minutes on your whistle or flash a mirror three times in the sun. Dense smoke produced by placing green leaves or grass in a fire, will generally be seen from lookout towers but don’t start a veld fire! Repeat your distress signal at regular intervals. Air searches can be assisted by placing a large, bright object such as a space blanket in a conspicuous place.

Air, water, shelter and food are the four basic essentials for survival. A person can live for three weeks or more without food, three days without water, three hours without protection in hostile weather and three to five minutes without air.

Water

If you are lost without sufficient water, conserve body fluids as much as you can by moving only in the cool of the day, talking as little as possible and keeping your mouth closed. Study the immediate terrain and search for clues to water sources. Look out for such things as dense reeds or large movements of animals in a certain direction as they usually indicate a water source. If you dig beneath the surface of dry river beds, at the base of big rocks where there is dense vegetation or the base of large sand dunes, you might find some water. Ore dumps and tailings indicate the water might be nearby in old mine shafts or pits.

If you are lost on a trail then resorting to these methods is not usually necessary.

Shelter

When building a shelter, avoid expending excessive energy. A cave or natural depression is far superior than a complicated wooden structure. Your shelter must minimise body heat loss and maximise body protection from the elements. Choose an area protected from the wind and avoid camping too close to rivers.

If you are stranded in timbered country, construct a simple lean-to from wood and vegetation. Ideally, it should be a three sided structure and offer maximum protection from prevailing night winds and cold. Use sticks and stones as supports and cover them with grass and leaves. You can construct heat reflectors at the back of a fire from logs, rocks, boulders, or a space blanket to allow the heat to radiate into the shelter.

Food

A person can survive for a number of weeks without food and in an emergency, food is your least important worry. Unless it’s absolutely necessary don’t waste energy searching for edible plants and animals. But it’s wise to bear the following points in mind should you need them.

1. No grasses are poisonous and the soft stem, swollen roots and seeds are edible.
2. Anything monkeys and baboons eat can be eaten by humans.
3. Insects such as locust, flying ants, dragonflies, hairless caterpillars, beetles and grubs can be eaten if cooked.
4. Honey can be obtained by smoking out a beehive.
5. Most fish are edible.
6. All fresh bird’s eggs are edible.
7. Avoid the following: fruits with smooth yellow or green skins and thorns on leaves or stems, dark purple fruits from plants with milky juice but no thorns, and fruits from carpetlike, low growing plants. If the first taste of the central pulp is bitter, don’t eat it! Spit out the seeds and keep away from mushrooms unless you are absolutely sure of their edibility.

The wilderness is a major hazard and the only way to counter that is never to enter wilderness areas. If we want to do so, we must accept an element of risk, the degree of which is largely dependent on ourselves.

Choose the correct answer from the options given below. Write ONLY the number of the question and letter of the option you have chosen.

- 1.1 To signal for help audibly is to
- A shoot a flair up into the air
 - B shout out loudly for help
 - C drop small pebbles along the trail
 - D flash a mirror in the sun
- (2)

- 1.2 "Natural depression" in context means a
- A footpath in the wood
 - B sad mood of hopelessness

QUESTION 2 THE PERFECT BODY

The only way to lose weight is to combine regular exercise with a well-balanced, low-fat diet.

Take your pick from the following activities to speed up your metabolism and burn up fat:

- ❖ Power walking is the easiest and cheapest exercise of all - it burns fat if you maintain a constant pace, pump your arms and walk on an incline whenever possible.
- ❖ Hill climbing is a massive energy-sapper. Spend a day enjoying the view and burning up an optimum 4,000 calories in the process.
- ❖ Get on your bike for a calorie-burning ride. Depending on your level of fitness, opt for an hour's cycling at a moderate pace, or go for a high-intensity, 25-minute ride.
- ❖ A recent study discovered that strenuous swimming burns four times more calories than strenuous running, so plunge into a pool. Stick to the more energetic crawl - breaststroke may be wonderfully relaxing, but it burns fewer calories.
- ❖ A gym is the perfect environment for exercising without distractions. Use the exercise bike, treadmill, rowing machine etc. Although many machines indicate the calories burned, some readouts fail to take into account important factors such as a person's weight and height.
- ❖ If you prefer exercising in your own home, workout videos which include at least one fat-burning aerobic segment will help you lose weight; those that focus on toning won't blitz unwanted body fat!
- ❖ Maybe the most popular activity in South Africa is jogging. Thousands, male and female, young and very old, enter for the Comrades Marathon every year. Long distance athletes and other sportsmen, especially boxers, jog as part of their fitness training.

You should also follow a diet of low fat and high fibre. The largest part should come from whole grains like cereals, brown bread and rice. Vegetables and fruit should form 10-25% of your daily intake. Dairy products and meats should be only 10% each. DON'T skip meals. Slow weight loss is best. Very low-calorie diets will only make you fat and miserable. Your body will burn calories more slowly, because your body will think you are starving. Remember, the opposite of fat is healthy, not thin!

-- adapted from OPTIONS, August

List at least SEVEN activities in which you can burn fat successfully, in no more than 65 words. Read the INSTRUCTIONS on the CONTENTS page carefully. (10)

QUESTION 1

SUNDAY TIMES BUSINESS AWARDS, 2002 TOKYO SEXWALE: CHAIRMAN—MVELA RESOURCES.

Read the following speech carefully, then answer the questions set on it.

It is particular instructive, pleasing as well, to note that the top ten of the one hundred Sunday Times companies of the year count amongst them several natural resource companies.

Mvelaphanda Holdings, which has modest assets and investments in other sectors of the economy, is once again reassured that its controlling investment in Mvelaphanda Resources has seen improved fortunes. The strategic decision to reverse our stakes in Northern Platinum and Trans Hex Diamonds into the then East-Daggafontein, breathed a new life into that company, provided a mix of diversified precious minerals, strengthened its balance sheet and consequently sent a clear signal both to the local and foreign investment community, that we are poised for further future growth.

Mvelaphanda Resources has forged stronger ties with De Beers, for Kimberlite exploration in the Limpopo region, Gold Fields, for minerals exploration throughout the African Continent as well as the Joint Venture with Southern Era to develop the recently acquired platinum reserves announced by the Minerals & Energy Ministry.

In recognition of the status quo, the investment community – particularly major institutional investors – demonstrated their confidence in Mvelaphanda as seen during our recent rights issue as well as in the performance of our share price which in less than a year has more than doubled.

My board remains cautiously optimistic that the buoyant resources market, more especially the steady demand for the unique platinum group of metals (PGM's) driven by jewellery, autocatalytic converters and fuel cells in the USA, Euro-zone, China, and of late India, provides ample opportunities for growth.

Judged upon across-the-board market conditions – sometimes exuberant – this sterling performance is attributable to the fact that we are committed to our shareholders through striving for costs containment, cash positivity, extension of reserves in the underlying assets and modest but continued dividend flows, - while at the same time paying attention to good corporate governance as we set ourselves achievable targets.

Having said that, we need to be equal to the facts. We would be less than candid were we not to openly recognise that as a Black Economic Empowerment company, Mvelaphanda Resources would not have registered its success without the levelling of the playing fields by the new democratic dispensation in South Africa.

The recently adopted Minerals Act coupled with the Mining Charter was a trailblazing event of leadership courage and conviction on the part of government, the mining majors as well as the representatives of the black empowerment groups.

Doomsday predictions and armchair critics were confounded by the willingness- notwithstanding certain sharp differences – on the part of all parties to reach an amicable solution, which went a long way to steady the volatile markets. The imperative is for other business sectors across the economy, to initiate and conclude meaningful empowerment transactions in equity, management and skill development.

Let us also attach great importance to sustainable community development for no enterprise can forever remain an isolated island of wealth surrounded by the sea of poverty. Where needs be, the spirit of philanthropy ought also to be encouraged for the creation of a caring and sharing society.

While the central logic and essence of business is the objective of accumulation on the basis of sound commercial principles returns for shareholders, the triple bottom line, as espoused in the recent World Summit on Sustainable Development, which encompasses other stakeholders, is equally crucial. In this respect the call for poverty alleviation is a tenet, which ought to be close to our hearts.

Accolades and awards as conveyed here are a recognition of one attribute or another. The media headlines come and go and the work starts again as we strive for improved headline earnings. Only in this way shall business consolidate its position as a partner to government and civil society for economic growth and social development.

The wealth of nations, indeed the essence prosperity and progress in society, is measured not so much by the success of one enterprise or the other, but more-so by how well we, as we are accorded awards, share the material rewards of our endeavours with the rest of society. We at Mvelaphanda, as a broad based Empowerment Company regard this credo as sacrosanct.

Our thanks go to the previous board and management of East-Daggafontein, the current executives of Mvela Resources as well as our staff in general; but most importantly to the men and women toiling in our various mines, particularly those working 3000 feet in high temperatures under ground. We honour them.

To you all, Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

QUESTION 1

Read the article red alert attentively and then answer the following questions.

The riverine rabbit, found only in the Karoo, is on the brink of extinction due to habitat loss. And, as South Africa's human population grows and places pressure on limited resources, other species may face an equally bleak future.

Vodacom and nature-conservation bodies are doing everything possible to ensure this doesn't happen. The company, already well known for its commitment to the environment, recently sponsored a Conservation Assessment and Management Plan (CAMP) to review the status of the country's 300 marine and terrestrial mammal species.

Yolan Friedmann, the chairperson of the Conservation Breeding Specialist Group (CBSG) of South Africa, describes the R150 000 CAMP project as "extremely exciting", adding that the process will make a resounding contribution to the ongoing conservation of biodiversity in South Africa.

The project, which aims to update the local Red Data Book for mammals, was co-sponsored by the National Research Foundation and is a joint partnership between the CBSG and the Species Survival Group of the Endangered Wildlife Trust, the World Conservation Union and a number of local conservation, research and academic organisations. With Vodacom's generous funding, the process will produce a report with management recommendations and conservation strategies for South African mammals and their habitats.

The Red Data Book, initiated in 1963, aims to prevent extinction by identifying, documenting and creating awareness of endangered species, and has become a key element in defining global and regional priorities. It categorises species according to levels of threat and risk of extinction, and acts as a global index of biodiversity loss.

The last South African version was published in 1986 and is outdated due to changes in population, geographic boundaries and taxonomic classifications.

That's why the CAMP process - seen as the most scientifically sound, broad-based and appropriate means of obtaining data - was launched in January. Almost 90 South African researchers were asked to obtain information on the mammals in which they specialise. With participation from parks boards, museums and non-governmental organisations, data sheets for almost all 300 species were submitted at an intensive six-day CAMP workshop held in March.

A number of exciting new conservation initiatives were born out of the CAMP workshop and, after months of review and editing, the final data will be released towards the end of this year. Then, to coincide with the launch of the 2003 Global Red List, the Vodacom Red Data Book for South African Mammals will be published in January 2003.

"Many people have worked long and hard to support this initiative, and we're very grateful to them - and to Vodacom," said Friedmann. "And, very importantly, we've unanimously agreed to carry out another full review of all South African mammals in 2008." #

You are required to write a summary in point form of no more than 40 words. List SEVEN facts about the Loggerhead turtles' nature and migratory habits. (10)

- ❖ Read INSTRUCTIONS on CONTENTS page attentively.

THE MIGRATION OF LOGGERHEADS

At the same time each year adult loggerhead turtles living on reefs off Madagascar, Mozambique, Tanzania and South Africa are moved by an internal force over which they have no control and about which they have no knowledge.

Between October and February every year loggerhead sea turtles depart from as far as Malindi, Kenya, 3,500 kilometres to the north, and Cape Agulhas, nearly 2,000 kilometres to the south, and converge on a lonely stretch of silica-sand beach known as Maputaland.

A sea turtle is not an aggressive animal. Indeed, it is one of the earth's gentlest creatures and has survived almost unchanged in form for nearly 100 million years. So conservative is the sea turtle that we can recognise the genera over a period of 60 million years!

Our loggerhead have probably been nesting on the Maputaland beaches for 60,000 years or more and if unmolested by anything other than their natural enemies, would probably have survived for many millennia yet. Unfortunately man, not renowned for his rational behaviour, started to reap too excessive a harvest of these creatures and in 1963 the Natal Parks Board enthusiastically responded to a request to protect the turtles in Maputaland.

Charged to change Sanlam's grey shoe culture

Enter Yvonne Themba (37), Sanlam's new chief executive of corporate affairs, who looks set to do much to jazz up the business and culture to ensure continued transformation. Snappy dresser Themba warns they had better catch a wake-up call: "I'm going to put the stilettos into Bellville."

One of Themba's strongest weapons has to be her charm. But a tough negotiator lurks beneath the confident façade. She relishes a challenge and you could be forgiven for seeing something of the adrenaline junkie in her.

She was born in Soweto and educated in Swaziland. To earn some cash before studying she worked as a croupier at Sun City for two years. She obtained a BA degree in economics and accounting at the University of Botswana. "Even then, I used to be a part-time croupier in Mmabatho, [and] I was self-financed at university... I dressed well, lived well and could support my mum."

She completed her degree in 1990 and looked for a job in Johannesburg. After a year she enrolled for an MBA at Wits. To help pay her way through the course, she took a job as a sales executive with Primedia's Highveld radio station before being attracted to the Cape by the prospect of working for e.tv. Themba says she found Cape Town's jazz scene a draw-card.

She was keen to test her skills outside the broadcasting industry. So she took the Life Offices Association position. She entered the Sanlam fold in March after deciding to stay in Cape Town.

Themba embraces Sanlam's four-pillar strategy on empowerment: employment equity, procurement and service, ownership and control transformation, and full participation in the economic development of South Africa, saying: "It speaks to the fundamentals of transformation"

But she knows it will be a gradual process and has to be handled holistically. "The insurance industry has a critical shortage of actuaries, accountants, economists and statisticians, so we need to think how our corporate social involvement can deal with education to address investment in the future." She says a number of Sanlam's business units are looking at teaching entrepreneurial skills at high school.

"One of the things I'll be looking after is our social investment - and if that becomes part of our strategic thinking, we'll win another award on top of the one we won for our reporting and communications. Our social strategy has to dovetail with our business strategy." Themba's main role will be to ensure that all stakeholders - shareholders, investors and staff - have the correct perception of Sanlam.

"I'm there for the long haul--- Sanlam's well placed for incredible transformation."
