Dr Olaide Agbaje is a passionate researcher and lecturer who is happy to mentor students and emerging researchers towards realising their academic dreams. Her research interest spans across the internationalisation of higher education with a special interest in international student mobility and experiences on the African continent and beyond. She has spent the last six years exploring this important discourse. Her research work was recognised by the Faculty of Education at the University of Pretoria when she was awarded the best PhD abstract (completed research) at the annual postgraduate research Indaba 2019. She has presented academic papers on student mobility and the experiences of international students at different conferences and workshops globally. Currently, she is one of the researchers engaged in an African student mobility project involving eight African countries, and she is in charge of the Nigeria country case. She is also working on other projects involving academic collaborations within and outside Africa. Her most recent publication is Agbaje O. (2020) Internationalization Efforts in the Nigerian Higher Education Sector. In: Adeyemo K. (eds) The Education Systems of Africa. Global Education Systems.
