Master's Degree (LLM) in Extractive Industry Law in Africa

The Faculty of Law of the University of Pretoria, widely known as Africa's Global Law Faculty, is proud to introduce a specialised Master's Degree in Extractive Industry Law in Africa.

A first for the continent, this new programme focusses on extractive industries in Africa from a multi-disciplinary perspective. The Programme comprehensively incorporates aspects of law, macro- and micro economics and management, finance, tax, mining engineering and earth sciences, as applied in contemporary oil, gas and mineral extraction.

Programme duration is one year, following a blended model of intensive, on-campus contact sessions and distance learning modules, to allow for a flexible learning experience and to accommodate working professionals. The Programme will be of particular interest to candidates from legal practice who work with the extractive industries, government officials, legislators, policymakers, and industry regulators. The programme also provides an excellent foundation for recent graduates on which to prepare for a career in this dynamic and exciting field.

This is a selection course, with a maximum of 25 students selected per year.
