At Tuks it's all about getting the volley right

THE University of Pretoria women's volleyball team has qualified to represent South Africa in December in the African Zone Six Tournament.

The tournament will also be contested in Durban where the best club teams from Angola, Botswana, Zambia, Swaziland and Mozambique will be in action.

Tuks won the Tubby Reddy Classic Tournament played in Durban at the weekend to book their spot in the African competition.

Tuks coach GP Fourie said much work lay ahead for his charges.

"I honestly believe that UP-Tuks are capable of making their presence felt during the Zone Six Tournament, but the real hard work only starts now. I got to realise over the weekend what a significant influence altitude has on the flight of the ball. The players will have to adjust to it in the way they play the ball.

"I don't think people realise how tactical volleyball can be. Statistics are vital because that is how you establish what a team's strong points and weaknesses are." – African News Agency (ANA)
