Science & SciLifeLab Prize for Young Scientists

APPLICATION DEADLINE
15 July 2018

BACKGROUND

In order to promote young scientists early in their career, SciLifeLab has engaged in a collaboration with American Association for the Advancement of Science AAAS and Science magazine to award an annual prize in the area of life science for the best PhD thesis work. An essay based on the thesis is submitted to the editorial board of Science and four winners are selected and invited for a week in Stockholm to attend the prize ceremony and to interact with the SciLifeLab community. All winners also have their essays published by Science.

ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA

- Recent doctoral graduates in the life sciences may submit a 1000-word essay based on their thesis work.
- Four winners — in the categories of
  - Cell and Molecular Biology,
  - Ecology and Environment,
  - Genomics and Proteomics and
  - Translational Medicine — will be selected for this international award.

The winner will:

- Have their essay published by Science
- Receive up to 30,000 USD in prize money
- Be honoured in Stockholm, Sweden in December
