

Nina Honiball

My principal research interests lie in the field of human-centred design, participatory research (or action research) and community engagement. Within design research, I am interested in design thinking, co-design, and participatory design. Within the field of action research my interest lies in the use of participatory reflection and action (PLA) as a methodology to drive self-initiated change amongst community members and organisations. My future research plans are to build on the foundations of my PhD and develop a longitudinal research project to involve future master's and doctoral students in socially oriented design research. I am also interested to join or help establish a research unit and partner with industry for funding and research to implement practice-based projects in the field of design and healthcare. In addition, I would also love to contribute to the use and development of visual research methodologies in academia.
