School of the Arts: Music

Tamlyn Harker is a first year doctoral candidate. She completed both her BMus (with distinction) and MMus at the University of Pretoria in 2019 and 2020, respectively. She lectures Music Psychology, and Music Technology at UNISA. Additionally, she is a freelance violinist and teaches violin at a girls' school in Johannesburg. Tamlyn found a passion for research while investigating the effects of Hypermobility Spectrum Disorder (HSD) and Performance-Related Musculoskeletal Disorders, both of which greatly affected her playing ability. Her long-term goal is to create an opportunity for more research to be done into the effects of HSD on musicians.
