

Call for Nominations to the Prince Salman Award for Disability Research

The General Secretariat of the Prince Salman Award for Disability Research is proud to extend invitations to academic, health, social, governmental, and non-governmental organizations and societies to nominate noted researchers who have accumulated an exceptional record in advancing the field of disabilities research in the medical-health, pedagogical-educational, or social rehabilitative domains. Please note that only nominations from organizations and societies, not from individuals, will be accepted. The deadline date for receiving the nominations is September 30, 2011. Interested organizations and societies are encouraged to visit our website (www.pscdr.org.sa) for further information regarding the Award, means of submission online, fields of the Award, and the byelaws governing it.

This prestigious international Award will be bestowed on researchers who have been rigorously judged and selected by renowned professionals and referees. The winners will be invited to Saudi Arabia to participate in a special Award ceremony where each winner will receive a certificate with the name of the winner, and a summary of the work which qualified him/her for the award. An honorary medal gold and 250,000 SR.

The Award Committee has selected the following topics for this cycle of the Award:

1. Health and Medical Sciences Branch:
"Neuro-Developmental Behavioral Disabilities"
2. Pedagogical and Educational Branch:
"The Utilization of Assistive Technology in Teaching and Training Students with Disabilities"
3. Rehabilitative and Social Sciences Branch:
"Developing Environmental and Rehabilitative Methods to Integrate Persons with Disabilities in Society"

The General Secretariat of the Prince Salman Award for Disability Research looks forward to receiving your nominations.
