

Long-term Programme “Being Human Today: The Effects of Race”

The Stellenbosch Institute for Advanced Study (STIAS) welcomes proposals for scholarly projects to be undertaken within the framework of a new long-term programme, “Being Human Today: The Effects of Race.” Projects can be from any academic discipline, and should offer innovative and imaginative approaches towards understanding the persistence of race thinking and racism, and of antagonism to fellow human beings, in a democratic South Africa.

Projects will be undertaken by scholars holding a Doctoral degree or equivalent. Projects of up to three years’ duration beginning in July or August 2014 will be entertained. Suggestions for short projects and supervised doctoral projects are also welcome. Projects will not involve disbursement of cash awards. Funds for development of surveys, project-related travel, etc., will be approved and disbursed by STIAS. Further background details, guidelines, criteria for assessment and downloadable forms for application can be found at stias.ac.za/eor

Pre-proposals will be accepted until 1 December 2013 at EOR@sun.ac.za. Notifications, including invitations for full proposals, will be issued on 14 February 2014. Full proposals will be due on 11 April 2014. Notification of the outcome of review of full proposals will be issued on or before 13 June 2014.

STIAS reserves the right not to award any grant and will not enter into correspondence about decisions.
