This course will explore, first, the core components of the talent management value chain, namely, planning, attracting, retaining and developing talent and, generally how to win in the ongoing war for talent. Secondly, the specific case of managing talent when operating in dynamic markets will be covered. How have global companies managed the complex field of international talent management without depleting their home base human resources? Third, the course will provide students with some insights into managing their own careers effectively. The elective will explore talent management from both theoretical and practical perspectives.
